Unique Parade.

When the train pulled in Wednesday evening, carrying on board the happiest couple in the world, Mr. and Mrs. Deane Goodman, a most unique reception party met them at the depot.

There was the usual shower of rice, old shoes, et cetera, but this was no ordinary reception. Our most popular young man had just been married to our most popular young lady, and Juntura must rise to the occasion and greet them in a fitting manner.

The roads were pretty muddy for an auto parade, so it was decided to get the next most unusual conveyance. At last some local wit suggested a gentle mule on which both bride and groom could sit and ride through the streets to their home.

Not having a gentle mule in town, one was acquired from the Masterson ranch and properly decked out for the gala occasion.

Never was excitement at such a fever heat since the day that it was announced that we could have county division, and never was a mule of such humble origin so extravagantly arrayed since the day the gentle Galilean rode into Jerusalem with the crowd singing "Hosanna in the highest."

Bells hanging to every available place upon the mule's anatomy, rang out a sweet welcome as the party proceeded towards the depot, flags strapped to his long ears gave evidence of his patriotic disposition, bunting of every hue was wrapped about his body, hiding all that was ugly and giving his muleship an appearance of solid citizenship, while rugs of Oriental splendor covered his back making a seat thereon equal in softness and richness to that on the back of King Solomon's mule, if he ever had one, it never went to the railroad depot to meet a wedding party.

Thus arrayed the mule was led up to the blushing young folks after the shower of rice had subsided and they were graciously asked to mount, and together were given a ride through town on the burro, which was led by the mayor and followed by the band and a host of admiring friends. After shaking hands and receiving the well wishes of some two hundred friends who had gathered to pay their respects, the happy couple went out to the ranch to dig the rice out of their clothing and to live happy forever after.—Juntura Times.

Road to Happiness.

We expect the roads to happiness, like those which lead to heaven, to be very long and especially very complex, says Jean Finot. Yet there are candid souls who go there by the simplest ways. And the road they pursue is the best one.

Encouraging Theory.

The encouraging theory recently advanced that the mineral elements of the soil are inexhaustible seems to be borne out by the fact that Chinese soils are among the richest in the world after 4,000 years of intensive cultivation.
